LALORAN JUSTISA - at a glance

LALORAN JUSTISA (Waves of Justice) is a new 20-episode law and order TV drama series centred around Rosa, a young lawyer working to defend the human rights of her clients.

The series will be launched at a special screening in Dili Cineplex, Timor Leste, on 18 August 2017.

LALORAN JUSTISA has been designed, created and written through a partnership of Asia Justice and Rights (AJAR) and the Timor Leste Provedor for Human Rights and Justice (PDHJ). The European Union financed the series, and Dili Film Works as local partners received the completed scripts and produced the episodes.

The Tetun-language series presents high-stakes law and order drama, family tensions, football, music and love stories in combination with important human rights and democracy themes. The key principle behind LALORAN JUSTISA is that first rate drama and entertainment with a broad audience can also include key information about human rights issues. This principle has been demonstrated by AJAR's previous work on the highly successful Myanmar TV series "The Sun, The Moon, and the Truth."

LALORAN JUSTISA will be screened every Tuesday and Friday night from 29 August on the national television network RTTL. In addition, the PDHJ and AJAR will host screenings in all districts of the country and use the episodes in a range of other activities designed to increase understanding of human rights issues.

Statement from the Executive Producer

"In creating Laloran Justisa, AJAR's scriptwriting team of Australian barrister Patrick Burgess and AFI award winner Phillip Gwynne drew on their previous work on the highly successful Myanmar series "The Sun, the Moon and the Truth", which has been viewed by an estimated 7 million people. The key belief underlying both Laloran Justisa and the Myanmar series is that it is possible to create first rate drama and entertainment that attracts a broad audience but also includes key information on human rights issues.

Laloran Justisa is an example of AJAR's model for rights-based TV drama series that can be adapted for various country contexts and focus issues. The underlying goal of this new form of human rights education is to promote discussion, as the gateway to deeper learning. When viewers are talking about the love stories, dramatic crises and their favorite characters in tea shops, homes, buses and schools they will also inevitably be thinking and talking about the actions and morals of those characters, and the broader rights issues.

The 'world' in which the characters in the series interact was adapted for Timor-Leste through the close partnership with PDHJ and working on the scripts with AJAR Timor-Leste Director Jose Luis Oliviera and a range of Timorese writers, advisors and rights experts.

The casting, locations and beautiful film work of Dili Film Works, guided by Directors Bety Reis and Luigi Acquisto bring the stories to life in the gritty and strikingly beautiful surroundings of Timor Leste. Production of twenty episodes of television in Timor Leste, requiring months of preparation and shooting in hot, difficult circumstances presented major logistical and professional challenges that required a rare degree of professional commitment and expertise to overcome. The high quality of the final product is a testament to the experience and expertise of Dili Film Works production team, the contribution of their Australian advisors and mentors and the deep commitment of the cast and crew."

Patrick Burgess,
Executive Producer.

Synopsis of stories and themes

The central character in LALORAN JUSTISA is Rosa, a young human rights lawyer with a big heart but limited experience, struggling to help her poor clients deal with a range of legal problems. These include a murder trial, domestic violence, environmental pollution, unfair elections, corruption and nepotism.

Rosa is engaged to be married to a successful local businessman Helio and her mother is determined that the marriage go ahead - but Rosa is beginning to have some doubts. Does Helio have something to hide? This becomes more complicated when several of Rosa's cases bring her into contact with the handsome young policeman Vitor. But is Vitor hiding something of his own?

As the series progresses we also follow Tinho and Paula, two innocent young people from country villages as they discover that moving to the city is not quite the dream they had imagined. Tinho is a football wizard but will he ever get the chance to try out for the national team? And how will Paula ever reach her goal of studying at university? Another character, Siti was one of thousands of children taken from Timor Leste by an Indonesian soldier during the decades of conflict. Thirty years later she has returned, with only one ragged photograph as a clue to help her find her long lost family. Is it an impossible task?

Important cultural-rights issues are also confronted, including challenges faced by a transgender character Holly; the effect of domestic violence and alcohol on a family; the choices faced by a victim of sexual assault; and nepotism in a government office.

Along the way the viewers meet a colorful cast of characters including an overenthusiastic young journalist Zeca Mosquito, who finds himself entangled in two defamation cases while also trying 'Blues Brothers'-style to get his old rock band back together; the free-spirited Laku Bere who is always in the right place at the right time; Felipe and Maria who dream of opening a restaurant; and a wealthy foreign investor with much to learn about sustainable development.

Launch and Broadcast dates (Timor-Leste)

A special screening of the first two episodes will be held at Dili Cineplex (invitation-only) on August 18, 2017.

Maximising impact

The PDHJ and AJAR partnership also includes a range of activities designed to maximize the impact of the series. These include mobile screenings, discussions and focus groups in all districts of the country,

The series will be distributed on DVD/USB drives for those without access to television, and customised trainings will be developed for officials and civil society groups focused on issues covered in the episodes. Television and radio talk shows discussing the show and its themes will be aired, along with a book that includes plain language summaries of the major rights and democracy issues accompanied by glossy photographs of the stars and stills from the series.

AJAR and PDHJ also organized a national song competition, with prizes including music equipment for songwriters and performers of the best songs relating to issues covered in the series. A CD of these songs is planned to be released soon, including free distribution to minibus drivers and others interested in spreading the message of “Waves of Justice.”

ROSA, played by Irim Tolentino, is a young lawyer who works for a small NGO. Her work is to help people who have a human rights or legal problem and can't afford to pay a lawyer. Rosa is engaged to be married to ...

... HELIO, a local businessman played by Zofimo Hanjam Corbafo. Helio is rich and from a good family. But something is making Rosa wonder if he is really the man for her. Is Rosa nervous about the marriage, or is Helio hiding something?

VITOR is a handsome and strong young policeman, played by Jose Sarmiento Piedade. He often works on cases with Rosa. Does this explain why Rosa is unsure about her engagement? Or is it Vitor who has a secret?

TINHO, played by Eugenio Castela Soares, is a football wizard from a rural village in Ainaro. He dreams of playing for the national Timor-Leste football team.

PAULA, played by Dorotéia Castela Soares, is also from Ainaro and wants to go to school and university. She loves running and dreams of success in Dili. But the city has many dangers and disappointments for young people. Without LAKU BERE, played by Elias Taxes De Jesus, to help out, can they overcome the problems they will face?

SITI, played by Maria Madalena Caminha, is an Indonesian woman with a young child. Siti has learned that members of the Indonesian military took her from her family in Timor-Leste when she was a child.

Siti has forgotten how to speak Tetun. And with only an old photo to guide her - plus the goodwill of people like HOLLY, played by Zezinho Belo - will Siti find her family?

FELIPE is frustrated. He is confined to a wheelchair but dreams of opening a restaurant with his wife MARIA, played by Gizela Pires Pereira. Can his dream become reality? And at what cost?

Each week in LALORAN JUSTISA, Rosa and her assistant Eduardo are busy with cases involving people from the local village:

Someone is arrested for murder, but did he really commit the crime? Will he be released from prison, or must he remain there for many years?

The local water supply is being poisoned. Could it be the nearby car workshop that is responsible and if so what can be done? EDUARDO, played by Julio de Costa Correia, investigates.

SOFIA, played by Ercilia do Rosario da Costa, loves her husband, but these days he is always drunk and beats her. What can she do?

Why are there no books in the local school and where has the money for them gone? INES, played by Augusta Castela Soares, is a teacher who is determined to find out. But it may lead to problems for herself.

Who is behind the plans for a new tourist resort? And will the new resort block access to the beach for local fishermen? Journalist ZECA MOSQUITO, played by Osme Gonzalves, is 'buzzing' around looking for stories. But when Zeca investigates the powerful people behind the resort he finds himself in 'hot water' and needs Rosa to help him get out.

And will Zeca ever get the band back together?

To find out the answers to all of these questions, and many more...
